When life presents problems, all a heroine really wants is an answer key to fix them. Shannon Waller lives a paycheck-to-paycheck existence in far north Montana. A missing husband. Not even a pet. Alone. Suddenly life hands her the kind of money she only dreams of—an amount that starts with a B. A move to Ithaca, New York and into a home she inherits plus new friends—what more can she ask for? Private investigator Michael Silver is determined to find out who might want to kill Shannon. While his life seems safe, hers is one 'accident' after another, each hurting her worse. When a bullet barely misses Shannon, she and Michael have to discover who, what and why she's a target for murder. And do it fast before the next attempt succeeds!

Ada Nata, the novel, is set in a West African village, a place of moonlit nights and games, a place of much laughter, where stories were forever told about past heroes and heroines. Life in the village was never boring or tedious. It was a lot of fun. Along the way, some things began to happen in the village that previously had not. Life in the village was subsequently changed in very profound ways. In fact, life was never again the same. The moons were there, as was the village square, but fear rather than songs took over the nights. The days were no better. Suspicions grew and enveloped the people, their parents, and their children. There were relationships that were broken beyond mending. There were customs observed, challenged, and nullified, and could never be restored. There were clashes between youth and the elders, between tradition and circumstance. Out of these have emerged stories, told and retold until they could be told no more. In the end, the village has remained a unique symbol, despite adversities, to remind us all of what was, who we were, and where we came from. Ada Nata is the retelling of one of many a story. I hope that it is as vivid for you as it was for me, writing it.
